City opens bids for Madison Plaza site

Both offers at or below proposed minimum

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Madison's Redevelopment Commission Wednesday opened offers on the two tracts of land the city hopes to get developed at the former Madison Plaza site at the intersection of Clifty Drive and Michigan Road on Madison's hilltop.

The city had offered the two tracts — one the former strip mall property and the other a never before developed wooded parcel — for commercial redevelopment and new development as multi-family housing with assigned offer sheets of $1.7 million for the commercial site and $750,000 for the housing, respectively. After giving potential investors more than a month to consider the proposals and their options for the property, two bids — one for each tract — were received.

The bid on the wooded parcel just did meet the city's $750,000 minimum while the bid on the commercial site fell well short at $1.2 million. Neither bidder was identified by the Commission and both offers were taken under advisement.

According to Joe Jenner, attorney for the City of Madison and the Redevelopment Commission, the city must

County to begin updating ordinances for two-mile buffer zone

BY COLLIN OVERTON

Jefferson County Commissioners took another step Thursday in a plan to improve ordinance enforcement and draw a clearer line between county and city rules in the two-mile buffer zone.

County officials voted to leave the buffer zone agreement last December following years of debate and concern from residents that growing issues like noise, trash and other public nuisances in the area were not enforceable under the current terms of the agreement.

A committee of county and city officials met earlier this year to salvage and improve the agreement and came up with the following recommendations: the county will reverse its rescission on the agreement and extract the nuisance provisions from its own zoning ordinance and enforce them as a separate ordinance, both entities will publish FAQs on their roles in the buffer zone, the city will add a resident of the buffer zone to its Board of Zoning Appeals, and the county will amend its geographic information system (GIS) overlay so property owners can determine if their land is inside or outside the zone.

Thursday's decision covered the first two steps: reversing the rescission and extracting nuisance amendments to begin working on a separate, stronger ordinance. That would help Jefferson County set firmer boundaries on things like trash, weeds, noise and junk vehicles on properties.

"It's just the start right now," Commission President David Bramer said of the new property ordinance. "We know of some things we want to add to it, but we figured that we could go ahead since this is already an ordinance that has been adopted.

We can start it and we can take our time and do some of the things we know we want to get done in the two-mile buffer zone and help those people that live there, and provide a course of recourse — a course of action that they can follow for things that come up there."

Madison reaffirms commitment to diversity, inclusion

Wallace condemned the actions of police involved in the death of George Floyd in Minneapolis and said Madison has a "zero tolerance" policy for such actions.

The City of Madison has had a Human Relations Commission since 1968 with policies opposing racism and discrimination, but that didn't stop City Council from adopting a resolution Wednesday reaffirming the city's commitment to promote a diverse and inclusive community — especially in light of the protests against police brutality that are taking place in major cities across the country and as close as Louisville, Indianapolis and Cincinnati.

Mayor Bob Courtney invited Human Relations Commission members and others to speak

BZA approves three variances at Thursday meeting

BY COLLIN OVERTON

The Jefferson County Board of Zoning Appeals approved three conditional use permits at its monthly meeting Wednesday night.

Board members first approved a request from Ryan Wardlow to set up a roadside produce stand on State Road 62 in Hanover Township on a 7.35-acre tract that is zoned both agricultural and light industrial. The business would be located about 100 feet back from the highway in the middle of the field and include a 40 by 110-foot gravel parking lot for up to 10 cars.

Members asked Wardlow if barriers would be set up to prevent customers from parking on the side of the road and causing safety concerns, but he said the layout of the driveway and road prevented this.

Wardlow plans to sell produce and flowers out of an existing pole barn without sides, water or electricity Thursday through Sunday during daylight hours. He

MPD task force makes 16th drug arrest

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Madison Police executing a search warrant on Walnut Street arrested a local man on drug and drug paraphernalia charges Thursday in what was the 16th drug-related arrest to date by the city's newly formed Crime Suppression Team.

A search warrant was obtained for 219-221 Walnut Street as a result of an ongoing narcotics investigation led by MPD Detectives Ricky Harrris and Kyle Cutshaw and the MPD Crime Suppression Team. It was the fifth narcotic search warrant served by the special task force.

The officers found methamphetamine and related paraphernalia and arrested Daniel W. Brim, 34, Madison for possession of methamphetamine, a Level 5 felony, and possession of paraphernalia.

The detectives were assisted by MPD Chief John Wallace, Assistant Chief Ben McKay, Lt. Dan Slygh, Sgt. Shawn Scudder, Patrolmen Chad Wehner, Zackery Nicholson and Cody Lewis and Chief Det. Yancey Denning of the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department.

Brim was lodged in the Jefferson County Jail.

Speaking to Madison City Council Wednesday night, Wallace said the CST is targeting drug users and drug hangouts to take drugs, weapons, drug currency and the people who harbor them off the city's streets and noted that two additional officers — Jeremy Perkins and Scudder — will be reassigned as detectives to assist with investigating cases for prosecution. He urged residents who suspect drug activity in their neighborhood, to call Madison Police Department at 812-265-3347.

"If you have a concern in your neighborhood, give us and call." Wallace said.

SUSPECT IN MANHUNT SPOTTED BY OFFICER, PLACED UNDER ARREST

Elsewhere, a Madison man being sought on drug and firearm charges was arrested by the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department on Thursday.

Madison Police had posted on social media Wednesday that they were seeking information on the whereabouts of Nicholas J. Tucker, 30, who was wanted for several narcotic and firearms charges based on an investigation by Scudder.

Tucker was linked to the May 29 arrest of Cassondra Lockridge, 22, of Madison, on various drug-related charges. While serving an arrest warrant for Lockridge at 316 First Street, officers found narcotics, paraphernalia and 13 firearms that they were allegedly able to link to Tucker but he was not present at the residence. They were able to establish enough probable cause to obtain a warrant for Tucker's arrest but then had difficulty locating him.

Tucker was spotted as a passenger in a vehicle Thursday by a Jefferson County Indiana jail officer, who notified police with Sheriff's Department K9 Deputy Ben Flint and Scudder quickly responding to stop the vehicle and make the arrest.

Tucker is charged with dealing methamphetamine, unlawful possession of firearms by a felon, maintaining a common nuisance, possession of marijuana, dealing marijuana and possession of legend drugs. He was lodged at the Jefferson County Jail.

also plans to sell pumpkins out of the neighboring field in the fall.

Michael Thurman also applied for a variance to build a pole barn on his property on East S.R. 62 in the area of Sandy Beach in Milton Township. His request was to build 19 feet from the property line instead of 25 since the natural slope of the land prevents him from building within requirements. Thurman has already started work on the 24 by 36-foot barn and neighbors do not object to the project, Thurman told members of the board. His property is zoned agricultural.

The board granted the request.

Mike Geer on West 400 North in Madison was in a similar situation. Because of sloping ground on the southwest side of home, he was limited on the placement of a 30 by 40-foot pole barn with a walk-out basement. He requested to build it 45 feet from the center of the road instead of 90 feet as it was the only practical spot.

The last owner moved out because he couldn't find enough flat land to build a shed for his concrete business, Geer said. Board members unanimously approved the request.

at the Council's regular meeting Wednesday and the message they brought was primarily one of harmony and respect locally, if not so much in other areas of the country.

Pastor Harvey Leggett of the Broadway Baptist Church not only gave the traditional prayer before the Council meeting, but also spoke about the acceptance and respect he's felt in Madison over the past six years. As a longtime resident of Columbus, Indiana, Leggett noted that's not always the case for a black man living in a predominantly white community.

"I was stopped five times in Columbus over the years but I've not been stopped here because of who I am and what I drive," Leggett said.

Lifelong Madison resident Sue Livers said being black in Madison has never made her feel excluded. "I've lived all my life here and this is a very diverse and inclusive community," Livers said, noting that having a diverse and inclusive community is a choice and Madison has made that choice. "Inclusion — you have to choose it — you have to choose to make people feel welcome and make them feel like they belong."

Darius Whitson-Spegal was one of three young people who met with city leaders earlier on Wednesday to provide a snapshot of how they are treated by local police and the community. He said city leaders have always been supportive of minorities in Madison and that has carried over to the local police, of whom many are active in the community as mentors and coaches of youth.

And while people Whitson-Spegal's age are struggling to be heard and bring change through protests in other communities, that's not been necessary during his lifetime in Madison because city officials, from former Mayor Tim Armstrong to current Mayor Courtney, have always been willing to listen, he said.

Courtney said city leaders want to be part of the solution and proactive rather than reactive and that effective dialogue is much easier to achieve face-to-face than when people are shouting at each other or attacking on social media.

"I strongly condemn violence, hatred, discrimination and prejudice and I urge all communities to do the same," Courtney said.

Later in the meeting, Madison Police Chief John Wallace condemned the actions of police in the Minneapolis death of George Floyd that triggered the latest round of protest.

"As chief of the Madison Police Department, I strongly condemn the criminal acts by officers of the Minneapolis Police Department that led to the death of George Floyd," Wallace said. "This was an act of murder by a man in a police uniform and should be prosecuted as such. The non-action by the officers who watched this man die is sickening and intolerable. These officers, too, should face justice.

"The Madison Police Department currently evaluates officers on a six months basis and has zero — zero tolerance — for racial, ethnic or sexual discrimination. Madison Police officers receive annual and ongoing training on how to properly restrain and how to de-escalate situations," Wallace added. "My prayers for the people in Minneapolis and swift justice for George Floyd and his family. I encourage the citizens of Madison Indiana to contact me if they have any concerns."

Madison J.C. Penney among 154 stores closing nationally

BY COLLIN OVERTON

Madison's J.C. Penney store is one of dozens closing nationwide during the pandemic, the department store chain announced Thursday.

Madison is one of eight stores in Indiana and 154 nationwide closing due to lower sales and mounting debt exacerbated during the COVID-19 pandemic. On May 11, the 118-year-old retailer filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

Other JCPenney stores closing in Indiana include Bedford, Elkhart, Indianapolis, Kokomo, Muncie, Plymouth, Richmond and Vincennes. Over 500 stores have been reopened due to easing social distancing policies, but additional closings are expected in the coming weeks, the company announced.

The Madison store, located at 435 East Clifty Drive, was a popular spot for Black Friday, Christmas and back-to-school shopping as one of few clothing retailers in town. The selection will be more limited if its neighbor store, Gordman's, also closes due to parent company Stage Stores filing for bankruptcy on May 10.

Stage, which also owns the Peebles, Goody's, Palais Royal and Bealls chains has not announced plans for the Madison location.

Other nationwide brick-and-mortar chains have followed suit, with J. Crew, Neiman Marcus and Gold's Gym filing for Chapter 11 in the month of May.

JCPenney employees were not allowed to comment, per company policy.

Supporting people who have lost loved ones to COVID-19

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: Most people have not experienced the loss of a loved one from the COVID-19 virus. However, my father died Friday night after fighting weeks for his life. The situation was agonizing and yet our friends' reactions to it have been a bit surreal. Here are some tips on supporting the bereaved based on what we have experienced:

Please don't ask, "How did they catch this?" My father lived at home in a small community and was healthy otherwise. Who knows how he was exposed, and what does it matter to you?

Offer your sincere sympathy. My brother and I couldn't be with our father while he was hospitalized, not when he was trying to make end-of-life decisions and not even when the ventilator was disconnected and he died. That added to our stress greatly. Due to the shelter-in-place order, we won't be having a funeral service. Our father was cremated without us being able to view his body once more.

Take the extra step and send a sympathy card or text, or phone the loved ones. There is no shame in a COVID-19 death; please don't ignore it.

Don't say, "Let me know if you need anything." Just do something. Drop off a homemade meal or a floral bouquet, or order a pizza to be delivered.

Most importantly, please do not say how much this pandemic has inconvenienced you, or how tired you are of the restrictions. Additionally, I don't want to hear people's political views. I just want to know that people are going to be safe so that they — or their loved ones — don't have to go through this same wretched experience. — Mourning in Morton, IL

Dear Mourning: I am so sorry that this terrible disease took your father's life. It's always agonizing when a loved one dies, but losing someone during this pandemic presents additional heartache — not being able to be beside them in their final moments, not being able to view the body, not being able to hold a funeral or perform other important rites. And for many, it means grieving in isolation.

What an unnecessary burden to be dealing with stigmatization on top of such devastation. I hope you and your family will experience more compassion in the weeks to come.

Communication has gone to the dogs

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My wife and I have been married for 37 years. We have a fairly good marriage. However, when it comes to communication, there is much room for improvement.

I would very much like to get a second dog. I am 59 years old and home alone all day, as I am on disability. I have no friends to speak of, and my social life consists of the time and attention I give my dog. She is a standard schnauzer named Maggie Rose.

We can afford another dog. We have a big enough home, a fenced-in yard and all of the necessary things needed for responsible dog ownership.

The problem is that if I even bring up the subject, my wife will get very angry and immediately dismiss the idea without any discussion. We do not discuss issues in my home. If my wife gives her thumbs up, then it is a "go," and if she gives it a thumbs-down, then it is a "no-go."

There should be no reason why her refusal to get another dog should trump my desire to get another dog. Ideally, we should be able to sit down at the kitchen table and, lovingly and collegially, discuss the issue and mutually agree. Unfortunately, no such scenario exists.

I would be appreciative of any help you could give me. I would very much like to have another dog, as having dogs bring me much joy and needed company. I don't ask for very much; I don't understand why this is an issue. — Wanting a Brother or Sister for Maggie Rose

Dear Wanting a Brother or Sister for Maggie Rose: From what you say, your wife is acting like a dictator. What she says is law and that's that. However, I'm also hearing that you don't know (SET ITAL)why(END ITAL) she's a "no-go" on getting another dog. Start there.

After hearing her concerns, you can then share what this new dog will add to your life and the many studies that prove that dogs love to live in pairs, just like humans. They can play together, and when you and your wife leave the house, they have each other. It helps with all sorts of behavior issues that might arise with dogs, and it might help them live longer. But it will be your responsibility to care for this dog, not hers.

Your communication issues with your wife are bigger than a puppy pen, and I would highly encourage you to seek the advice of a counselor or therapist to learn how to share what's on your mind.

Dear Annie: Soon, we will be returning to our barbers and salons, some of whom have had no income for months. Whenever possible, I'd like to suggest patrons pay them for the haircuts, manicures, etc. that we would have gotten had the pandemic not happened. At my next haircut with my longtime barber, I plan to pay for that one plus the three or four I missed. It will not be a hardship for me (I'd have spent that money there anyway), and it may ease the pain for them. — Hairy in NJ

Dear Hairy: I think this is a fantastic idea, and I encourage anyone who is able to follow your lead. I intend to.

Southwestern's Mitchell Cline flies down the track during a meet in 2019.

Cline misses shot at history, looking ahead

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

In a perfect world, Mitchell Cline would have been at the starting line today with a chance to make history as the first Southwestern High School athlete to place at the IHSAA Track & Field State Finals.

Mitchell Cline

But like all high school athletes across the state, that chance was taken away in early April when the COVID-19 pandemic forced the IHSAA to cancel all spring sporting events, including the state tournament.

Two months ago, Cline may have been upset at missing his chance at history. But the recent Southwestern graduate has already moved on and is looking forward to his upcoming track career at Indiana State University.

"My college coach just sent us our 12-week workout, so I started doing that," Cline said on Wednesday. "I really don't think about (the state finals) too much anymore. I'm just so excited about college and getting with my roommate."

Cline is just one of several Courierarea athletes who had their dreams of reaching the track & field state finals dashed because of the coronavirus. But considering how well he did a year ago, Cline's situation is particularly noteworthy.

Cline has gotten faster every year. After placing 20th in the 400-meter dash as a sophomore, Cline was 10th last year in 49.80, just two spots away from the podium.

With four of the nine athletes ahead of him graduating — including Madison's Daunte O'Banion — Cline was in a terrific position to break the top 10.

"I tried not to get to upset about it when I heard about (the cancellation)," Cline said. "I had a real good chance of placing at the state finals but I try not to think about it."

While Cline at least got to compete in the state finals, Madison's Bryce Foy graduated last week without ever getting a shot.

Foy, who signed to run track at the University of Indianapolis last week, finished second at the sectional in the 100-meter dash and third in the 200 dash but an injury kept him out of the regional. Like Cline, his senior season got wiped out by the coronavirus.

"It's been rough not having my senior year but this is great," Foy said of signing with Indianapolis. "I just know that I have four more years of getting to run so, that's good to know."

Along with the two sprints, Foy had an excellent chance of reaching the state finals in the 1,600 relay along with teammates Jack Kelsey, Nick Center, Xavier Cosby and Carter Schutte. Cline also had a chance in the same event along with Brandon Smith, Colton Cloud and Gavyn Mundt.

Switzerland County senior Aleiah Thomas placed fifth in the high jump at the regional last year and was looking at a state appearance this year.

Her teammates Ally Furnish, Raylinn Kappes, Abby Niswander and Matty Anderson were hoping for a shot in the 1600 relay.

Madison's Lundun Perry, Harper Watson and Brett Cahall, Switzerland County's Furnish and Kierstan Oeffinger, and Southwestern's Kylie Eccles all reached the regional last year and were aiming for a state finals appearance this year.

"I really don't think about (the state finals) too much anymore. I'm just so excited about college and getting with my roommate."

— Mitchell Cline

Across the Ohio River, Trimble County junior Ryan Long won the Class 1A state title in the 100 dash and was second in the 200 dash and was hoping for a repeat this year, but will get a final chance next year as a senior.

Trimble junior Eliza Weston was seventh in the state in the 1,600 run last year and like Long, will get a final shot next year. A total of 10 Raiders who reached the state finals last season — Makayla Abbott, Danielle Craig, Matthew Craig, Emma Horn, Jace Ogburn, Tate Ogburn, Alex Seward and Tanner Smith — will be back next year for another shot.

While Cline may have turned his attention to college, he can't help but be reminded of the state finals every day.

His future roommate at Indiana State is Oak Hill's Tahj Johnson, who placed second in the 400 as a sophomore but slipped to sixth last season. He was hoping to win a state title this year.

Cline and Johnson hooked up this spring when each was looking for a roommate and have become fast friends.

"I know that I'll be going to bed early and waking up early and was worried that I would have a roommate on a totally different schedule," Cline said. "But Tahj and I have the same things in common and we have the same idea on how we want our dorm room to look. We're workout partners and we egg each other on all the time.

"I'm just so excited. I can't wait to get to school."

BIDS

contractually delay rebidding either tract for at least 30 days and by taking the bids under advisement it will give the city time to consider the proposals and weigh its options.

"This gives us time to discuss how we want to pursue this," Jenner noted.

Although the Commission seemed ready to reject the commercial bid, no decision was made on Wednesday, leaving the matter open to further discussions and options.

The city has offered the current property owner, Madison Plaza Group LLC, a combined $2.75 million contract for the roughly 23 acre site with hopes of stimulating development of a site that has seen little activity for close to 20 years and has sat cleared for redevelopment the last five years.

Mayor Bob Courtney has said the $2.75 million would be a good investment if it converts a site that has become an non-producing eyesore, developed and paying higher taxes and creating jobs. He estimated the two tracts could lead to $40 million in new capital investment.

However, since the city began negotiations with the property owner the nation has been hit by the COVID-19 pandemic with businesses shut down for months and many closing entirely. Just this week JC Penney announced that its Madison store was one of 154 stores that will close as part of a Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization.

"The COVID crisis has slowed down the timing of our potential development partners," Courtney said while respond to a text on Friday.

BUFFER

Bramer noted the city still has zoning jurisdiction inside the buffer zone, but new county rules on nuisances and noise would still apply inside the zone. That could be in the form of one improved ordinance or a series of smaller ones dealing with individual issues, he said.

"If you see the new one, don't think that that's going to be the final version. It is going to be implemented now but then we're going to go through and update it to take care of the issues we heard during that process on the committee with the city," Bramer said.

The agreement also implies that buffer zone issues will no longer go to Plan Commission as they had before. The county will now need to appoint an enforcement officer and create a line item in its yearly budget to enforce its ordinances in the zone, Bramer said.

Commissioners appointed Kathy Crafton as library trustee. Her term will run July 1 through June 20, 2024.

In other business Thursday:

- Commissioners appointed Kathy Crafton as library trustee. Her term will run July 1 through June 20, 2024.
- Commissioner Ron Lee reminded viewers that a public meeting on declaring Jefferson County a Second Amendment sanctuary is still in the works.
- Bramer said a draft comprehensive plan for 2020-2040 was ready for review and a public meeting will be scheduled soon.
- The county approved the purchase of 19 Plexiglas shields from local manufacturer Super-ATV at a cost of $1,890. The shields are designed to protect courthouse workers from COVID-19 exposure when the courthouse reopens to regular business. Pans for reopening the courthouse while reducing contact are in the works, Bramer said.
